Foreign soldiers help Ādaži entrepreneurs survive the Covid-19 crisis

Thanks to the National Armed Forces and foreign soldiers, the time of crisis has been easier for service providers in Adazi, but now most catering companies and beauty service providers have already been able to return to the pre-crisis level. Entrepreneurs estimate that the contribution of soldiers to business is at least 30%. The soldiers did not give up enjoying their favourite food during the Covid-19 crisis either, fast food products - sushi, kebabs, pizzas and others are more popular than ever. "Of course, we feel the improvement, because we have quite a lot of supplies to the Adazi landfill, and if it weren't for them, we could hardly still exist," admitted Lux Kebab owner Ivars Bodrovs. As the inhabitants of Adazi we can try to help our local shops, restaurants and cafes to get through this difficult time. Education

To stop the spread of covid-19 throughout Adazi High School will be taking place remotely.

The director of Adazu Secondary School says that the situation with the spread of covid-19 in the Adazu High school can no longer be controlled and can't provide a safe environment for the students and teachers. Therefore, a decision has been made to start distance learning by November 20. Parents need to act responsibly and make sure that students do their homework and be present in online classes. We cannot allow all teachers to get sick, because then there will be no workforce for educating our children. We wish you strength and health in this difficult time. Evelina Karklnia

Culture

Until November 18, every evening from 17.00 - 22.00, we invite families to take a leisurely evening walk through our Gaujas Street, where light installations delight the observers of both the Adazi Culture Center and the Adazi Primary School buildings. There have never been such light installations in Adazi region, so this is a great opportunity to spend a safe and festive evening in this difficult time. The light installation was created and designed by a famous Latvian lamp designer. These lights were not cheap, but hopefully they will bring joy to our inhabitants.
